EJADIRA

It's the fall of 2020, lockdown time. Two female musicians – 300 kilometers away from each other – choose not to give in to despondency and undertake a “musical correspondence”: recordings, notes, ideas are sent, they trust each other and thus create new music, from afar.

A few months later, they finally decide to meet in person and immortalize their first encounter in a free-flowing recording: thus Ejadira was born.

An improvisation and impromptu composition project: a fluctuating interaction between violin, accordion, voices and live looping that crosses baroque and folk sounds and meets the contemporary passing from lyrical moments to real dances.
